Small strike at the Danish Slaughterhouses is over

During this week Danish Crown has been hit by a strike in some of our Slaughterhouses meaning that we have been producing in smaller scale than we normally do.

In more detail it was the supervision engineers who are hired by the Danish Veterinary and Food Administration and who is a part of the food safety control on the slaughterhouses who stopped working.

This is a very special situation since these engineers isn't hired by Danish Crown therefore it has of course been difficult for Danish Crown to participate in solving this case. The strike only lasted a little more than one day and from this morning (Thursday 21th) all supervision engineers is working again and we will work hard to produce the products which we are behind with – this will be sorted within a couple of weeks.
